

bass in a band from the time he was thirteen years old. He has had the opportunity to adapt with changing music genres and funky band outfits. On stage, The Morrow Family Band catches attention of the audience in vintage outfits, which Dawn says captures their ageless sound.

When the family decided to start a band, Jim had to teach himself how to play lead guitar. "He really holds us together because we aren't as accomplished on our instruments as he is," said Melinda. "He practices everyday." Although Jim is retired, Melinda works full-time and Dawn works numerous jobs. "Music is the fun thing I do," said Dawn. "And it's like forced family time."

The three-piece acoustic Morrow Family Band has over 200 covers that they perform around town and even though the variety is clear, each song, whether its Lana Del Rey or The Beatles, ends up having a southern feel.

The Morrow family says that it is surreal that they are playing at venues around town that they grew up watching their family's other trio play at for years. "It's funny when you look back at all of the little steps and it's led us right back to here playing together," said Dawn.

---

See The Morrow Family
Band live at Colonial
Oak Music Park,
November 21st, 9pm

---

GOURMET HUT
New Orleans Scratch Kitchen

OPEN FOR
BRUNCH Friday, Saturday and Sunday 9am - 4pm
BREAKFAST and LUNCH Monday - Friday 8am to 4pm
DINNER and LATE NIGHT DINING 4pm - 3am
#thehutsaintaugustine ~ @GourmetHut